The reports just received show that a short time ago General Young drove the Filipinos across the mountains, inflicting heavy punishment. There they encountered Colonel Hood's troops and a fight took place which resulted in the wounding of Major Ward, of the Sixteenth Infantry, and the death of Steward Hare and five men.

The death of Hare and the five enlisted men was the result of an ambush, and a few days later Major Ward, with a company of the Sixteenth Infantry, left Aparri to make an expedition to Albuing, on the coast. Ward's detachment crossed the Cagayan River, and on landing was met by a heavy fire. Re-enforcements were secured from Aparri, and the enemy were driven off after a loss to the Americans driven off after a loss to the Americans of eight men wounded. The report adds that Tinio and Flores are doing all in their power to incite the natives to re-bellion and have already succeeded in bellion and have already succeeded in persuading many of the Igorrotes to rise in arms.

In Cavite Province fighting still continues and the reports bring further details of the engagement at Indang, where the Second Battalion of the Forty-sixth Infantry is stationed. A Spanish doctor living near Indang notified the garrison there that a strong force of insurgents was gathering near the town at a point which they used as a depot for supplies. Several companies of troops were sent against the Filipinos and quickly routed them, capturing 2,800 rounds of ammunition, nearly fifty suits of Tagal uniforms, and a nipa shack full of native insurgent sombreros.

An account is also given of a desperate fight near Los Banos, in Laguna Province, south of Manila. For some time Capt. ight near Los Banos, in Laguna Province, south of Manila. For some time Capt. Wallace C. Taylor, of the Thirty-ninth Infantry, has been expecting an ambush by the Filipinoe, under First Lieut. Raymond Villafuerte. made several attempts to capture the band under Villafuerte.

When he located the Filipino leaders, an expedition was planned for the purpose of trapping them. With six squads of troops, he marched along the road from the town, having first sent a body of troops across the mountains to get in the rebels' rear at the town of Bay. Captain Taylor and Captain Kreger, with their men, were met by a heavy fire, but returned it with spirit and caused the insurgents to fall back. In the rear the rebels were attacked by troops under Lieut. Arthur W. Orton. The insurgents then tries to escape to the left, but were met by a fire from troops under Lieutenant Williams. At Tarlac, where Aguinaldo at one time had his headquarters, three Filipino highwaymen are under sentence of death. The men belonged to a party of Negritos and Filipinos that attacked the inhabitants of O'Donnell, killing six harmless natives and wounding three. They looted the town and escaped to the mountains. Three of the gang were captured, tried by the native courts, and sentenced to be shot. A deachment of troops is now located at O'Donnell.
